MT 3

Jordan specializes in an area where technology and legal practice intersect. He has many years of experience working for large law firms and in the national vendor space.

Jordan supports MT>3's work with a particular focus on supporting our Vancouver and Calgary offices. His role involves project management, strategic decision-making, finance and budgeting, contracts, and resource management within the e-Discovery field.

Jordan is regularly called upon to work directly with the Firm's clients to formulate defensible strategies at all stages of the e-Discovery workflow, from initial data preservation and collection to production and presentation at trial. The Firm's clients rely on Jordan's expertise to bring value to a process that can be complex and costly.

In addition to his extensive professional e-Discovery experience, Jordan's expertise has been developed through a unique blend of education that includes law, computer science, business, and project management. Jordan most recently completed an MBA at Imperial College London, UK and is currently completing a computer science program through the University of Victoria as well as Project Management certification. During his undergraduate studies, Jordan studied electronics engineering, as well as restorative justice and mediation.
