Marissa Caldwell is an associate in our Business Law Group in Toronto. Marissa advises clients in a broad range of sectors on strategies and issues relating to technology commercialization, intellectual property, consumer products, consumer protection, e-commerce, privacy, anti-spam, broadcasting and telecommunications, and marketing and advertising.

As a trademark agent licensed by Canada's College of Patent Agents and Trademark Agents, Marissa has helped to obtain trademark protection for clients in a wide range of industries. Marissa also advises clients on the protection and enforcement of their trademark rights, and has represented numerous clients before the Trademarks Opposition Board. Marissa also brings her trademark knowledge to her marketing and advertising practice, where she advises clients with respect to false and misleading advertising, influencer marketing, contests and sweepstakes, and responding to regulatory complaints, including those from Health Canada, the Competition Bureau, and Ad Standards.

Marissa has extensive experience advising clients on privacy compliance, including developing internal privacy compliance programs, and responding to inquiries from, and investigations conducted by, provincial and federal privacy commissioners. She also has experience advising clients with respect to requests made under federal and provincial freedom of information laws, and appealing decisions related thereto. Marissa is a Certified Information Privacy Professional (Canada) (CIPP/C) and a Certified Information Privacy Professional (US) (CIPP/US).

While in law school, Marissa was a program manager at Sport Solution, a legal clinic that assists Canada's Olympic and National Team athletes navigate legal issues such as team selection, funding, doping, and athlete-National Sport Organization (NSO) contract disputes. Building on this work, Marissa was appointed by the Canadian Olympic Committee to be Team Canada's Ombudsperson at the Beijing 2022 Winter Olympics.

Prior to law school, Marissa worked in documentary film production, television production, and founded a production company specializing in
