With a keen interest in disruption, Kosta always looks for the most innovative solutions to clients' problems.

Kosta is a partner in our Litigation Group in Toronto. He maintains a broad litigation practice, assisting public and privately held corporations (or their directors, senior management, or shareholders) with all manner of complex corporate/commercial disputes.. He also has experience representing clients in disputes relating to professional negligence, regulatory oversight, product liability, false or deceptive advertising, real property investment, development and/or co-ownership, and estates.

As a leader in the firm's Automotive Industry Group, he also has extensive expertise advising clients (within and outside of the dispute process) on all things automotive, including: motor vehicle safety compliance, motor vehicle importing, safety recalls, dealer/consumer regulations, manufacturing, supply-chain, and cutting-edge autonomous and AI technologies.

Over the course of his career, Kosta has represented many clients in high-stakes matters before all levels of the Ontario courts and a multitude of administrative bodies (including the License Appeal Tribunal). He has also represented clients in fast-paced domestic and international arbitrations. While trial-tested, he understands that clients frequently face unique challenge, several of which call for solutions outside of the courtroom. As such, he routinely provides strategic and pragmatic advice to clients before, after, and outside of the litigation context altogether; all with a view to achieving the client's objective in a timely and cost-effective manner.

Some of his recent notable work includes:

Dispute Resolution

- represented Cineworld in a significant M&A litigation concerning termination of $2.8B+ transaction for breaches of ordinary course covenant (Canadian Law Awards' 2022 Commercial Litigation Case of the Year);
